

h a u n t

Reprise

by Regina Agu

But here, the wind says it has been, it has been Pill of And the sea says it must be, it must be Love And the sun says it can be, it will be So soon And the rain of Weeds Where They Were Wrecked
We stared at each other, blood on my face, tears on hers.
It was as if he wiped himself. Didn't take a looking glass.
Speak For Me in the wind that is their voice,
Beyond the sea that is their anger.

† Regina Agu lives and works in Houston, TX. Her work has been included in exhibitions, public readings, and performances nationally, including recent presentations at The Drawing Center, New York; DiverseWorks, Houston; The American University Museum Katzen Arts Center in DC; Art League Houston; Project Row Houses; and The Station Museum, Houston. She is co-director of Alabama Song, a collaboratively-run artist's space in Houston, and a co-founder of the independent small press, paratext. Recent awards and residencies include Artadia Award, Houston, 2017; Lawndale Artist Studio Resident, Lawndale Art Center, Houston, TX, 2017-2018; SEED Grant for Alabama Song (with Gabriel Martinez), The Robert Rauschenberg Foundation, 2016; Open Sessions 2016-2017 at The Drawing Center. <http://www.reginaagu.com/>

Editor in Chief

Virginia Arce

Managing Editor

Charisse Pearlina Weston

Associate Editor

Erin Gordon

Design & Founding Editor

Amanda McGough

Faculty Advisors

Antoinette LeFarge

Simon Leung

Litia Perta

Haunt Journal of Art

Volume 4

2017

ISSN 2334-1165 (PRINT)

Address:

Haunt Journal of Art

Department of Art

Claire Trevor School of the Arts

University of California, Irvine

3229 Art Culture and Technology

Irvine, CA 92697-2775

Email:

hauntjournal@uci.edu

Website:

www.hauntjournal.org

http://escholarship.org/uc/uciart_hauntjournal

For more information on forthcoming calls and submissions guidelines please visit our website.

Haunt Journal of Art is a graduate student run, peer-reviewed, open access journal from the University of California, Irvine, published online through eScholarship. We believe speculative and innovative art writing practices are paramount to the development of radical thinking and imagination.

Copyright 2017 by Haunt Journal of Art